February Work Party

Thank you to all who attended and organized the conex containers. Repairs were also made. This was much needed.

March Work Party

The burn pile will be the major project and the general tidying of the range will take place. So this will be another light duty day.

I recently read an article by Heather Reeves titled Give Women Options, Not Doom and Gloom, February 18, 2019. I think this would really apply to anyone. So, here is the article:

"Statistically speaking, women are more likely to be victimized than men. According to the Rape, Abuse & Incest National Network 1 in 6 women in their lifetime will be a victim of complete or incomplete rape or sexual assault. In contrast 1 in 33 men will be victimized in the same way. By the numbers this is astonishing and there aren't many out there who would refute women being targeted at higher rates than men. In addition, media outlets consistently highlight abuse statistics that put women at a disadvantage of abuse survival due to factors such as guns in the home.

What those assessments neglect is that there is a systematic failure in our society to properly train and equip women to be their own first responders. Since the dawn of time criminals, by their very nature, use the tools that are available to commit crimes of opportunity. Since their goal is to get you to submit to their will, they will use whichever tool of intimidation is available. Is there a gun available? A knife? A rock? A fist? Whatever they have available and consider the most intimidating to their target they will use. There is no doubt in anyone's mind that perpetrators of any crime need to be held accountable, but at the same time, we need to hold ourselves accountable for our own safety.

However, if you have never been "in the know" for how to go about getting training this can be a daunting task and if you've been conditioned to believe that you need someone else to protect you, then it can be downright intimidating. But recognizing that you need training is the best first step ever because in this day and age you've got plenty of options to choose from.

Once you've made the decision that you need training you will need to decide which route will be best for you in your current situation. Do you want to learn to use a gun or are hand-to-hand skills more what you're looking for? Do you know a lot about the legal system in your state in regard to self-defense or are you starting from square one? Have you thought about what you do in your daily life to stay safe, or are you just becoming aware that there are prevention strategies? Have you thought about the potential legal and emotional ramifications for using any sort of self-defense in today's society? No matter which avenue you take, there are programs out there welcoming newcomers into the fold."

Another good read from Tom McHale. His website is MyGunCulture.com. It's a half-cocked but right on target look at the world of shooting and all things related. If you want to learn with a laugh about guns, shooting products, personal defense, competition, industry news and the occasional Second Amendment issue, visit him there. Tom McHale is the editor of American Handgunner Magazine and the author of the Practical Guides series of how-to shooting books. He is also part of the Gun Cranks with Brent Wheat and Roy Huntington.

Happy St. Patrick's Day!

There are good ships and there are wood ships, the ships that sail the sea. But the best ships are friendships, and may they ever be.
